CHAMP CLARK'S STORY.

How It Impressed a Youngster Who Heard

It In a Speech. this state. A number of distinguished made a very profound impression upon his mind. The speaker was no other than Champ Clark.

Clark?" but then he was a new star in the firmament.

We had a number of speeches, and the children were very tired. I can't speak for the grown people, because the good Democrats there would not have owned to being tired, I know, after such a display of eloquence from their great party leaders. At any rate I was tired, but my mother whispered:

"There is only one more speech," and I was much relieved. A blond young man was introduced as Champ Clark of Pike county. He came forward with a pleasant face and manner that at once attracted my attention. He began in this way:

"I am reminded of the boy who killed a possum and expected to enjoy a possum dinner the next day. The family was about to sit down to the dinner table when a wagon drove up and a neighbor's family came in. The head of the house announced that the visitors had come to dinner. There was no room at the table for our young friend, the sportman, and he waited, with his eyes anxiously fixed on the dish of possum. The guests had good appetites. Finally there was only one piece of possum left, and one of his own family took that. Then the possum lover busted right out a-crying. The disappointment was too much for him.

"My friends," continued Mr. Clark, "I am in that same condition. When I heard the first speech, I thought, wellthat is pretty bad, but still I have something left to say. Then there came the next speech, and the next, and when the last speaker finished I just busted right out a-crying, because there was not another thing left for me to say."

But there was, and he said it too. He awakened that audience till you could hear its applause a mile away.

I think that that was probably the first time Champ Clark ever spoke in St. Charles county. He carried back home with him the thanks and appreciation of a good many of his hearers that day. -St. Louis Republic.

FOUNDING THE KONGO STATE.

Explorer Stanley Tells In Brief the Story of the Great Enterprise.

During my descent of the Kongo I had revolved over and over in my mind the question of the destiny of the river. Seated at the prow of my boat, which led our flotilla, and daily watching the river developing itself, I was preoccupied with these thoughts every leisure moment. There was, it seemed to me, no other power but England that could interest itself with this part of Africa, and, as I said, there was not a single white man in possession of any portion of the equatorial belt except at the mouth of the Kongo, where a few traders had gathered. But despite the numerous addresses in England upon this subject I failed to awaken more than a geographical interest in equatorial Africa. The terror of the African climate in general was too strong upon everybody.

Elsewhere, however, the reports of my addresses in the English newspapers were taking effect. After nearly nine months' busy life in England the king of the Belgians invited me to visit him, and I was then informed of his strong inclination to undertake for Africa what I had been so strenuously advising Englishmen to do. He was already president of the African International association, which was about to set on foot a humanitarian enterprise from the east coast, and he led me to understand that if I were free from other engagements he would like to employ me in opening ! the Kongo basin to European influence and civilization.

It was my opinion that the best way of setting about the work was to construct a light surface railway which should skirt the cataracts of the lower Kongo and then to launch steamers on the upper waters, which I estimated would furnish about 6,000 miles of navigation. We argued about this matter from August to December, 1878. The best Belgian engineers were consulted. but after the most elaborate calculations as to cost it was finally decided that as the expense would be great we should content ourselves with making wagon roads past the cataracts and build a series of military stations for the protection of caravans, and that the annual expenditure should not exceed $60,000.

-Henry M. Stanley in Century. Thoroughly Parisian.

A remarkable incident was enacted the other day on the Paris Pont des Arts. A well dressed man, who displayed no emotion, stopped a passerby and handed him a bundle of bank notes, remarking: "I give you this money as a free gift. Use it as you like. I can only hope that your life will be more happy than mine." Before the recipient could recover from his surprise the man had thrown himself into the Seine and was drowned. BETTER THAN A BOAT.

Life Preserver that Can Save a Large Number of People.

The ever-present danger of the seadangers illustrated almost daily by accounts of collision, fire or other disaster, so often attended with loss of life-have prompted the invention of many more or less ingenious life-saving devices. One of the simplest, and yet most valuable, is that lately introduced by William Brandt at Lubeck, Germany.

Substantially it is a reproduction on a very large scale, of the life-saving ships. But, besides its greater carrying capacity, it presents some novel and sensible features, which enhance its value. Numerous partitions divide the belt into water-tight compartments, so that damage to any part does not materially affect the efficiency of the whole. The great elasticity of the belt reduces the danger of damage to a minimum. Despite its great size it is very light. One man can easily roll it along the deck and fling it overboard. It does not matter how it strikes the waterit invariably turns right side up. The middle space is taken up by a strong network. An important addition is that of ropes made fast to the periphery of the belt, and kept afloat by corks. so that persons several yards away

The Crown Princess of Denmark is the tallest royal lady in Europe, her height being over 6 feet 2 inches. She is a granddaughter of Mlle. Desiree Clary, who was the first sweetheart of Napoleon Bonaparte. They quarreled, and Mlle. Clary married Bernadotte, who eventually became king of Norway and Sweden. Napoleon always remembered his old sweetheart with affection, and helped her husband out of one or two political snarls for Desiree's sake. The Crown Princess of Denmark is the richest as well as the tallest European princess, she having inherited a fortune of $25,000,000 from her maternal grandfather, Prince Frederick of the Netherlands, in addition to the fortune left her by her father.

McKee and Mr. Russell Harrison and of will carry his plans through to the end. the late Mrs. Benjamin Harrison are surprised and annoyed at the persistent reports from New York that the children of ex-President Harrison are reconciled to his approaching marriage.

Nothing could be further from the truth. As matters stand now the marriage of the ex-president will make a distinct and possibly permanent breach in his family and separate him definitely from his children. Neither Mrs. Mcing terms with their stepmother to be, and both have interposed an earnest though dignified opposition to the proposed marriage.

This opposition arises, they insist, not from any dislike of their father marrying a second time, but solely from a with the history of the acquaintance which leads to the approaching marriage make the event an act of disrespect to the memory of their mother.

Mrs. Harrison had endeavored during her illness to bring about a pleasanter state of affairs in the family, and for a time her work seemed to be successful. It is understood that one basis of the compromise was that no such event as that about to take place would be considered.

Mrs. Dimmick continued to live in the White House. After the president's term ended, Mrs. McKee returned to Indianapolis to prepare her father's home for his permanent residence. Mrs. Dimmick quickly appeared. As soon as she could without attracting comment, Mrs. have since made their home elsewhere.

Last summer Mr. Harrison took a cottage in the Adirondacks and asked Mrs. McKee to live with him there. She cousented, and Mrs. Dimmick promptly appeared as a guest. There was more arm-

SHOWN.

Bonnets Seem Deliciously Dainty and Hats Are Perky and Fresh-Everything in Millinery Now Has a Decidedly Springlike Appearance.

LL the millinery "openings" have been celebrated, and those who attended them have settled down to the conclusion that Easter headgear will present very few absolutely new features. Yet the bonnets seem so deliciously dainty and the hats so perky and fresh that one quite loses sight there are few changes. In general, hats are lighter, flowers are spread, brims are transparent, trimming is crisp, and everything is as springlike as can be. Flowers and ribbons are the characteristic trimmings for the season, and there is a tendency to cut away from the heavy plumes that have made the winter hats so picturesque. Pleated silks, ribbon and gauze seem in place on all hats; indeed, one may almost say that no hat should be without something of the sort. One of the few real novelties is a little turbanlike hat of the sort that comes first in the accompanying illustrations. These are in endless variety. On them are yards and yards of crisp mousseline de soie or paper-like taffeta crinkled into the tiniest accordion pleats and cut into ruffles about a hand breadth wide. Then the ruffles are pinked out tion of this completely corrupted headalong the edge, and on a tiny wire dress is a sailor crown set on an accorframe the ruffle, all crinkled and crisp, see where it begins or ends. It seems of crysanthemums, and right up out of the center stands an aigrette. Such a headpiece is a hat, a turban or a bonnet, just as you wear it, and if it is unbecoming, it is because you have not had sense enough to adjust its folds to the most bewitching indorsement of every good, point you have. These little affairs are to be very popular. They are as light as a thistle down, and come in all sorts of bright colors, geranium, turquolse-blue and bright grass-green being three of the pet shades. Their lightness is not an exceptional recommendation, because all the new hats are of featherweight. This is a comforting discovery, and another one is that the easy shape so long worn, the one next shown, with a medium crown and a brim scooping wide in front and narrowing to the ears and back, now appears with a wire crown and with a brim of colored grasses woven in and out between the hair-like wires. A ruche of crisp grass-green tulle is at the very edge of the brim, a loose knot of sprangly ox-eyed daisies or miniature and ragged sunflowers is laid on the top of the brim, there is a lift of gauzy ribbon all yellow and green, black and white and so on, and a few in-woven strands of colored grass cover the meshes of the wire crown. That is all, but it is so light, so pretty and so fresh! Think of the first rain? Nonsense; it couldn't rain when a girl had on a hat like that; it would be just monstrous!

EASTER HEADGEAR. snape whose brim is pushed up in the center and that is recalled as being very fashionable only a few years ago. One of this sort comes next in the pictures. Its wee crown is there somewhere, but it is not to be seen, because of the scallopy crisp ruche of gauze in dresden colors and a thousand pleats that is laid along the top of the brim. The crown is at the base of the light bunch of flowers that triumphs out of the very center of this gauzy maze, but who cares? The flower nods, the leaves spray prettily over all, and the many colored ribbons that are woven into the brim throw soft varied lights on the pretty face beneath. The hats of the season have an air of vouching for the prettiness of the face beneath, for one feels that only a pretty girl would put on such a hat, or at any rate, that she would be pretty once she got it on.

No springtime description of hats would do unless the latest demonstration of the sailor were discussed. And how unlike the simple sailor is the sailor of to-day! It will never on earth be buried, and by nature it is too much at home on the water to ever come to grief there. This season it has a brim of rough straw in many colors, or a brim of lace shirred closely and wired. or one that is all woven of the stems of flowers, the flowers themselves adding to the criss-cross of colors. About the crown for a band, is jeweled or gold ribbon. The band should be as wide as the crown is high, and it should sparkle and glitter. Wherever the fancy elects pretty wide-spreading and many looped bows of ribbon are placed, and the ribbon must be multi-colored. Caught with one of the bows will be a bunch of high standing flowers. Such a hat must present all the colors of the season—that is, turquoise blue, bright green, soft rose, gray and black and a touch of claret. Of the result of all this elaboration you may judge by glancing at the fourth of these pictures. Of course there are other sailors, and perhaps the most frivolous demonstra-

mums. The tendency in big hats is toward cutting them close at the sides and spreading only in front, but there are fewer of the crazily shaped freaks of straw that were ventured a year ago, and the fashion, always trying, even to a young face, of turning the brim up straight from the forehead, no longer claims attention as a novelty. The very piquant and very young girl who found becoming the touch of audacity such a hat gave may still wear the shape, but most of us will try the demurer brim that seems to shade the eyes and the brow. Among the demure effects of the season, and for that matter of several seasons back, is the empire poke. As seen in the last picture. this is an exaggerated Salvation Army bonnet, with its brim starting upward suddenly in front instead of drooping low, and by the tilt being as much more saucy as demureness always is when there is a twinkle in the eye and a dimple a-lurk under the prim look. A Sheep That Was Born With Its Head Upside Down.

An interesting freak of nature which has engaged the attention of most prominent veterinary surgeons of Philadelphia is the property of Messrs. Weldy & Hingley. It is a sheep perfectly sound in every respect except that the head is curiously twisted out of its normal position, being turned completely upside down, the crown resting upon the animal's breast. The freak, which answers to the name of Twist, was recently imported by the present owners from Nova Scotia after a great display of red tape on the part of customs officials.

Twist is a twin, and he and his mate were both born with this curious malformation eight months ago. The mate died, but Twist was reared on the bottle by the children of the sheep farmer. Now he feeds himself, but he can eat his food only from the ground, and he has to push his head down between his fore legs to do it. He can't lift his head above his breast at all. Dr. S. J. J. THE BICYCLE OUTPUT.

This Year's Production Expected to Exceed by Far That of 1895.

It is expected that the output of bicycles in this country for 1896 will far exceed that of 1895. It is said that American manufacturers are prepared to produce this year, if they can get, when they need them, sufficient supplies of steel tubing and other material, 800,-000 bicycles. The output last year was, approximately, 450,000 bicycles. It is thought that the actual production this year will reach 650,000. It is more likely to exceed that number.

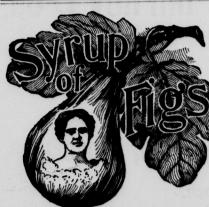

Few wheels are imported, not enough to cut any figure here. Our exports are still not great. American manufacturers have been too busy supplying the home demand to make much effort to supply other markets, but they continue to increase. We are selling more bicycles in Mexico and more in South America, principally in the Argentine Republic. Our exports to Europe are also increasing, the greater number going to France and Belgium, though we sell some wheels in other continental countries and in Great Britain. In Paris enough American bicycles are now sold to make them a factor in the trade.—New York

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge that so many forms of the knowledge that so many forms of the knowledge that so many sound discontinuous control of the sound of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal eleanliness, without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, and sold by all reputable druggists. If in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, then laxatives or other remedies are not needed. HOW A METHODIST MINISTER CARRIES HIS YEARS.

William Young, of Oswego, Tells a Reporter His Secret of Good Health.—Will Surely Benefit Everyone Who Follows His Advice.

From the Times, Oswego, N. Y. Probably no man is better known or more highly respected in Oswego, N. Y., than Rev. William Young, of the Methodist Church. [Mr. Young has not a Conference appointment, but holds a responsible position with the Oswego City Savings Bank, where he has been a trusty employe for the past twenty years.

In the spring of 1894 Mr. Young looked as if his time on earth was limited and that he would be laid at rest with the great majority before snow covered the ground. But, in-stead of failing as was predicted, he soon gained a more healthy look and appeared stronger. As the months went by this improvement continued, until now he is as rugged and apparently as healthy as a young man of thirty, although his gray locks denote had made this great, and it might be said phenomenal change, called upon Mr. Young at the bank and put the question direct and received the following reply: "In turth I am changed a man, and l owe my present good health to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. In the spring of 1894 I was all run down and had commenced to think that my time had come. I had to be prescribed for by physicians, and although I received temporary relief, the same old trouble came back again and I was worse than before. I had no strength or appetite, and physically I was in a miserable condition. After my work I would go home, but the general lassitude which hung over me left me without any ambition, and when I would go to the table to eat, my appeitte failed me and I would have to leave without taking hardly any nourishment. My kidneys were also badly affected, and I was in utter despair. One day, here at the bank, I happened to pick up one of the local papers, and my eye fell on an advertisement of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The advertisement gave a description of a man who, afflicted as I then was, had been cured by using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I was not a believer in that kind of doctoring, but concluded as a last resort to try a box of the pills, making up my mind that if they did not help me I certainly would not be injured any. SLAVE RAIDS IN AFRICA.

More Than a Hundred Villages Destroyed In One Campaign

As we approached the falls we saw that the river banks had been depopulated and the villages were in ashes. We passed dead bodies floating in the river. Canoes were standing on end like hollowed columns; crowds of fugitives were afloat and hiding among the reedy islands. These were all signs of a general terror, but we could get no information of its character. Vague ideas of an invasion from some savage tribe came to our minds, and now and then we had a misgiving that there must be Arab slavers in the neighborhood. Continuing our ascent, on the third day we came in sight of a huge Arab camp on the right bank, and before long we discovered that the Arabs of Nyangwe (Livingstone's farthest point), having heard the most exaggerated reports of our successful descent of the Kongo in 1877, had hastened after us to reap a harvest of ivory and slaves. They had been too successful. Over 118 villages had been destroyed below Stanley falls alone, a rich plunder of ivory was in their camp, and several hundred slaves, old and young, were herded like goats and heavily fettered in the slave pen. It then appeared that while we had been negotiating with the negro chiefs along the river, making roads, building stations and hauling steamers overland, the Arabs of Nyangwe had been coming down the river, laying the country waste. We had at last met, about 50 miles below the falls. A glance at the scenes of the camp was sufficient to reveal what a future awaited the Kongo valley had we not conceived the project of opening the river to civilizing influences. There was not a moment to lose. We had no authority to open fire on the miscreants. They were subjects of the Prince of Zanzibar, who was a protege of England, and to plunge into hostilities with them might possibly involve us in serious complications. But while we dared not use force we believed that by continuing the same system we had found so successful with the native chiefs we could check the audacity of the slavers by our mere presence among them. After some days spent in cautious and friendly negotiations with the Arabs we were permitted to establish a station at the falls, and after seeing it well advanced we turned the prows of our steamers down river toward Leopoldville.-Henry M. CONSUMPTION CURED. An Elixir of Life.

T. A. Slocum Offers to Send Two Bottles Free of His Remedy to Cure Consumption and all Lung Troubles.

Nothing could be fairer, more philan-thropic or carry more joy in its wake than the ofter of T. A. Slocum, M. C., of 183 Pearl Street, New York. Perfectly confi-dent that he has an absolute remedy for the cure of consumption and all pulmonary complaints, he offers through this paper to send two bottles free to any reader who is suffering from lung trouble or consump-tion, also loss of flesh and all conditions of tion, also loss of flesh and all conditions of wasting. He invites those desirous of obtaining this remedy to send their express and post-office address, and to receive in return the two bottles free, which will arrest the approach of death. Already this remedy, by its timely use, has permanently cured thousands of cases which were given up, and death was looked upon as an early visitor.

Knowing his remedy as he does, and being so proof-positive of its beneficent results, Dr. Slocum considers it his religious duty, a duty which he owes to humanity, to donate his infallible remedy where it will assault the enemy in its citadel, and, by its inherent potency, stay the current of dissolution, bringing joy to homes over which the shadow of the grave has been gradually growing more strongly defined, causing fond hearts to grieve. The cheapness of the remedy—offered freely—apart from its inherent strength, is enough to commend it, and more so is the perfect confidence of the great chemist making the offer, who holds out life to those already becoming emavisitor. out life to those already becoming ema-ciated, and says: "Be cured."

The invitation is certainly worthy of the consideration of the afflicted, who, for years, have been taking nauseous nostrums without effect; who have ostracised themselves from home and friends to live in more salubrious climes, where the atmos-phere is more congenial to weakened lungs, nd who have fought against death with all the weapons and strength in their hands. There will be no mistake in sending for these free bottles—the mistake will be in passing the invitation by.

Old English Music. Long before the stream of Norman minstrel art sacred music was exercising a beneficial influence. The early British church possessed sacred music, but this was gradually driven out before the onward march of that new church music which Augustine brought with him from Rome (A. D. 597). The Gregorian music (evolved by Pope Gregory out of the Greek tetrachords and some existing Ambrosian chants) was heard and loved wherever Augustine and his monks built a church. By its means a deep impression was left upon the minds of those who heard and joined in it, but it is curious that we miss altogether the ecclesiastical flavor in the earliest examples that have come down to us of English music during the first quarter of the thirteenth century.

The free and uncontroled secular music was the first to reflect itself in permanent manuscript form. Church music per se was not progressive; the church tones for the "service" and "mass" music were fixed, and only a heretical offense was the outcome of tampering therewith, but no such restrictions hampered secular music. — Blackwood's Magazine.

THEY WILL BEAR WATCHING.

Under this Republican government, with its free and enlightened people, political parties are not only a benefit to the body politic and therefore desirable, they are indipsensable, and, as time and experience have demonof public affairs.

While this is "a government of the people, by the people and for the people," it is, nevertheless, a government controlled and carried on by and through the medium of political parties therefore, it follows as a logical sequence, that these political oragnizations must be of the people and controlled and conducted by and for the people. To this end, they must be founded upon and dominated by the broad democratic doctrine of popular suffrage, and the executive of this principle entrusted to the "virtuous care and honest endeavors of upright men."

The primary election is the very fountainhead and source of all power in such an organization as essential to its life, as is the blood to that of the physical body.

It is founded upon the fundamental principle, embodied in that familiar and famous declaration so dear to freemen, that "governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed."

Any deviation or departure from this principle, is in direct violation of the rights of the individual and must prove destructive of party organization. The selfish schemes engaged in the nefarious plot to overthrow the party primary, will well bear watching. When they lay their unclean hands upon this ark of the political covenant, they become traitors to their party and enemies of free government.

Should the time come when the party primary can be eliminated from party procedure, the end of party organization draws near and it is time to prepare its obsequies.

Receiving no aid in England, he came to the United States.

Here he put into motion his scheme of freeing his native country from the Spanish rule. He found means to equip loads of cabbages, one of the staple two small vessels, and with 200 volunteers he sailed for Venezuela. He landed early in 1806 and was attacked by a superior Spanish force, losing many of Miranca in effigy and offered $50,000 for his capture. He recouped his forces, and a few months later took a Spanish town, but did not succeed in arousing the people to revolution.

It was some time later that he met Bolivar and with him went to Europe to secure aid for their enterprise.

When they returned in December, 1810, Miranda organized the first republican government, which was made possible by the uprising of the people in April, 1810. He was vice president of congress and signed the constitution and the act of independence. He was commander of the army and won several Grading and Teaming-work victories over the Spanish, but his disregard for all proprieties finally got him into trouble. BEAUTIFUL JAPANESE CATHEDRAL

And Its Unique Way of Protection From Fire by Fountains.

When foreign architects visit Japan and see the cathedral of Buddhism for the first time, they are generally astonished at the magnificent structure. It is executed in pure oriental style and is richly ornamented with carvings. H. Ito, a famous builder of Nagoya City, designed it. The structure was commenced in 1878 and was completed in 1895. The cost has been estimated at $17,000,000. It would have greatly exceeded this arrount had not numbers of Buddhists worked without any recem-

As the structure neared completion the committee having the work in charge was much perplexed as to fire insurance. They found that no company would assume the risk on such a valuable wooden structure, the danger of destruction by fire being very great, and thus the premiun enormous sum of money. At last the committee decided on a design devised by Dr. Tanabe. Numbers of powerful fountains were constructed, both exterior and interior, which can be made to play on all parts of the structure at the same

Usually only one great ornamental fountain is playing, rising to the great height of 157 feet. This is probably the largest artificial for ntain in existence, emitting 82,080 gallons per hour. In case of fire all the water pressure is directed through the numbers of exterior and interior fountains. Thus every part of the structure, both inside and out, could soon be dreuched and any conflagration soon extinguished. -St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A SUDDEN DEATH NEAR COLMA.

On Wednesday last Christopher Mitchell, the 15 year-old son of William Mitchell, came to his death suddenly and under very sad circumstances within a short distance of his fathers' house on the Abbey Homestead, near Colma. William Mitchell, the father, is a colored man, who, for a number of years, has been carrying on a hog ranch at the Abbey Homestead. The son Christopher has been subject to epileptic fits since he was about four years of age. The boy has been in the habit of going up the little creek near the few days to the Land and Improvement house, to a spring, to bring water for Company's pumping plant on Chestnut household use. On Wednesday morning, abbut 7 o'clock, the lad went out That genial and deservedly as usual, leaving his father who was

PRESS NOTES.

A VALUABLE TREE.

From the San Bernardino "Sun" we gather some important facts in relation to timber trees adapted to the treeless lands in many parts of California. It is especially desirable that such trees should be selected for planting along fences and in vacant places as are useful and ornamental. The Australian black wattle, a member of the acacia family, is strongly recommended from an economic as well as a scenic point of view.

A correspondent in Australia, writing to the Sun, is quite enthusiastic in | car. "-Boston Commercial Bulletin. regard to the adaptability of this tree, and among the points urged in its favor is that it is an excellent substitute for oak for tanning purposes. The oak is rapidly disappearing, owing to the demand upon it for furniture, and besides it is of slow growth. The black wattle is extensively cultivated in New South Wales and Victoria, where the trees lend an indescribable charm to the scenery by their fragrant charm to the scenery by the scenery b blossoms and exquisite foliage.

The Skeleton of De Soto.

The local historians of Baton Ronge, La., believe that the mortal remains of THOS. F. FLOOD, AGENT Fernando De Soto lie buried between two gigantic live oaks near the present site of Port Hudson. The books tell different tales about the death and burial of the great discoverer. Some say that Wieland, Fredericksburg, he was wrapped in his mantle and thrown into the Mississippi; others that the remains were incased in a hollow log. In 1853 three hunters-Rigsby, Davis and Hurin-were encamped near what is now Port Hudson. While kindling a fire they found a human skeleton in a hollow log that had been lying in a drift. The bones were those of a man six feet tall. In the log a helmet, a rusty sword and a large bronze crucifix were also found, and on one of the fingers of the skeleton's hand a large seal ring. The discoverers of this ghastly memento believe that the remains were those of De Soto, the discoverer of the Mississippi river. The burial place of the bones is well known to the Rigsbys, who still reside in Louisiana. -St. Louis Republic.

Women's Reform Work In Prison. Philadelphia women are just now interested in working among the prison inmates, and there are various guilds and societies devoted exclusively to that purpose. Once a week the heavy prison doors are thrown open, and the "prison angels" go in to teach needlework, give kindly advice or read from good books. The "24 hour cases," or women who are simply locked up overnight to answer some minor charge, are made a special object of effort. The women engaged in the work are unanimous in the opinion that "it pays."

FANNING'S HEART.

Miss Irwin was very busy. She was handling a difficult assignment which by rights should have been given to one of the men reporters, and so it happened that she remained after every one else had gone to dinner, and for some time the walls of the city editor's room had listened to the unsusual sound at such an hour of a bad stub pen scratching over thin brown paper.

was interrupted by the opening of a hastily entered. Miss Irwin paused in her story long enough to look up.

"Oh," she said, "it's you, Fanning. Been to dinner already?"

"No, ma'am, not yet. I'm looking for Scranton. Hasn't come back yet, has "Not yet. Anything I can do for you?" "No, thanks. I just wanted to see him about a story—that little chap that was hurt. Read about it, didn't you? have let him do what he did." Scranton's interested. The little chap's dying. I've just come from the house, The doctors all say he'll die tonight, and I wanted to tell Scranton. I am so worried. Pshaw, I'm worried sick. I''--He paused, ran his fingers through his hair and looked embarrassed.

"Come, now, Fanning, tell me all about it," said the thoroughly interested Miss Irwin.

'There ain't much to tell. Oh, you to put the whole thing in a few lines, I'm afraid he might not die in time for me to get my story for the morning's nothing—he could afford it." paper. Just think of what I'd losesuch a beautiful story.'

Miss Irwin looked shocked, and Fanning saw it. His blue eyes took on a resolute expression, but the muscles of his face did not move, nor did his red cheeks grow the least bit redder. He lit a cigarette and said doggedly:

Yes, ma'am; so long as he's going to die-they said he won't live through tonight-he might have enough consideration for me to arrange it in time. Just my luck to get scooped." And he knocked off some cigarette ashes.

Miss Irwin gazed at the boy in astonishment. "Why, you cruel, cruel fellow," she exclaimed, in a disappointed tone, "I didn't think you were that sort." It was Fanning's turn to look disappointed. "You seem to think, because I 'Maybe we've got more inred way. than you think. Now, there ain't anyboy. Why, his mother and sister think I'm the best friend they've got, because if I hadn't said my say, the bully who hurt the little chap wouldn't have been held at all. I fixed him all right enough though; made things pretty lively at the police court, didn't I? Well, I guess.

'Say, if he would only hurry up and die in time I could write the most elegant and touching story. You just ought to see him. Everybody takes so much interest in him, and folks send him books and toys and jelly and all sorts of good things to eat. When I saw him this evening, the bed was covered with playthings, but if you'll believe it, he didn't seem to care for 'em at all. The only thing he noticed was a bunch of roses somebody had sent him. He wouldn't part with 'em, and when I saw him ly ing back there with the flowers against his cheek, I thought how pretty it would be for me to have him die with them in his hand. Say, wouldn't that be picturesque? I won't bother you, though, any longer. If you see Scranton, tell him about it; he'll be interested."

The door closed, and Miss Irwin was again alone. She couldn't take up the hardships which they themselves contrain of thought she had been pu uing when interrupted, and she still had the shocked look she assumed at the beginning of Fanning's conversation.

'Such a hardened fellow,' she muttered, "and yet at heart I really believe him to be what he says he is. The next morning Miss Irwin scanned the papers, but saw nothing about the boy. The evening papers contained long accounts of his life and death. Miss Irwin felt rather sorry that Fanning, with all his cruel, kind heart, had been scooped. She was sure his account would have surpassed those she had read, and she sighed as she thought of the roses. They had not been mentioned at all.

Several days passed. She was anxious to meet the police reporter. Curiosity caused her to wonder what he would say. Finally the chance came. She happened to be waiting for a car when Fanning passed. She stopped him. 'By the way, Fanning, I saw you were cheated out of your story about the little boy."

Yes, I was. Luck's dead against

"What time did he die?" "Three a. m. exactly. Just too late style, but his reply was too much for her. When she regained her composure, she said:

"I mean, did he know anybody? Was he conscious to the last?' "Oh, yes. He just opened his eyes; then he shut 'em again, and he opened em again and smiled real sweet at his mother and sister and me, and then, and then he—he just died nice, real nice. "Say," he touched Miss Irwin on the arm and laughed, "what do you suppose? His mother thinks so much of me she asked me to pick out the coffin; said she didn't know what would be appropriate. I selected a little beauty.

Say, you ought to have seen him in it.' Miss Irwin was becoming vastly interested in Fanning. He was so different from any one she had ever met before. Then, too, he puzzled her. His conversation was certainly of a "don't care" style, but somehow she couldn't believe him to be as heartless as he seemed. His story about the death of the little boy had affected her greatly; so much so, in fact, that she went to see the sorrow stricken mother. "Oh," said the mother, between her tears, "you are from The Morning Herald, you say? It is so kind of you to come. My poor little boy thought The Herald was the best paper in town; he often sold it. If all the people on The Mr. Fanning"-

One of the first resolutions which are formed by men and women who are succeeding in life, that is, as measured by the only standard in use nowadays, increasing their possessions far beyond their actual needs, is that they will put safeguards around their children; the tended against shall never, if they can help it, be encountered by their offspring. They not only coddle themselves, indulge themselves with unaccustomed luxuries and spare themselves all avoidable physical exertion, but they believe this course to be the right way to live, and that if it is good for them, it is good for their children. They do not understand that character is formed under the pressure of the compulsory hardships and self denials of youth, just as they forget that health is not a gift or an accident, but the reward of abstinence and of hard work under natural conditions, perhaps continued through several generations. - Frederick

DO SNAKES CHARM?

THERE ARE PROS AND CONS TO THIS QUESTION APPARENTLY.

A Tale From Texas Which Supports the Affirmative, but There Are Naturalists Who Say No-Claim That the Snake's Victims Are Self Hypnotized,

A gopher snake at Escondido has been the cause of much earnest discussion among local naturalists. The question discussed was, "Do Snakes Charm or Hypnotize Their Prey?" One of the naturalists had the unusual but fortunate experience at Escondido of happening upon a large gopher snake just as the reptile was about to overcome a trembling cottontail rabbit and envelop the animal in its deadly coils. For some time the naturalist watched the snake's movements.

It was within 10 or 12 inches of the apparently fascinated rabbit. Silently and almost imperceptibly the snake had wormed its way nearer and nearer to its victim. Its eyes glistened with an intense brightness. Not a movement did it make which might alarm the timid rabbit. The forked tongue, which to the eye of a human being is so repulsive and intended to be terrifying, appeared Herald are so good and kind as you and to exert an entirely different influence upon the mind of the innocent rabbit. This darting tongue either excited "Yes, do you know him? I don't the victim's curiosity or caused the anistrength that it could not break the spell and run away from impending death. The forked tongue darted out of the snake's mouth almost as regularly and rapidly as the needle of a sewing "It's a blessed thing to be rich, and machine rises and falls in the cloth. The to have so much power on a great big lithe body crept nearer and nearer. The about the rabbit failed to break the spell, "May I ask what he did?" inquired and softly and slowly grim death in snake form wreathed its folds about the creature. Then was the spell broken.

But the strong coils of the snake were in position. Never a rabbit lived that An extra twist of the cruel coils and "So," mused the lady reporter, as she poor bunny was no more. Lungs, heart snake dragged the prey under an adjoining bush for dinner.

To the naturalist who watched the capture of the rabbit it appeared as if to fascinate the victim.

Other naturalists claim that snakes do not possess the power of fascinating ei-"To explain what they are," replied ther birds or animals. One man who has wait for the attack of a snake or even go forward to meet it in fear and trembling, but without any power of retaliation.

Now, any one who watches the behavior of small animals placed alive as food in the cages in which snakes are kept in captivity in the hope of seeing this marvelous power in operation will be grievously disappointed. Chickens, rats, guinea pigs, rabbits, all move about with an utter absence of fear of the snakes. My belief is that it is possible to account for the popular belief that snakes possess a power to fascinate for several reasons. An observer may come on the scene and find a number of birds mobbing a snake just as they will mob an owl or a buzzard. The dashes of the bird toward the snake and their fluttering round it may easily be put down to the effect of the snake's glance, while they are in reality merely attempts of the birds to drive off the intruder. A mother bird whose young are attacked will almost certainly behave in this way and may herself fall a victim, not to the power of fascination in the snake, but to the force of her maternal feelings.

It may be the mobbing of the snake by the companions of a victim that has been seized or of a mother whose nest has been robbed; it may be simply the effect of poison already injected before the observer has come upon the scene, or it may be simple curiosity. In ninetynine cases out of a hundred one or the other of these causes has been at work. What, then, of the hundredth case, and what about the fascination exercised on man, cases of which have undoubtedly been recorded? The explanation lies in the probability that it is a case of self hypnotism.

It is an error to suppose that will power has anything to do with the effect. The matter has been taken up scientifically by the medical profession and it has been found that the hypnotic state of sleep or trance, or whatever it may be termed, can be produced by looking fixedly at the operator or at a coin or at the tip of one's own nose. It that the courts give him $50,000. -Cinis not necessary to go into the question of how the result is brought about, but there is a physiological explanation. What happens then in the hundredth case is that the man or the animal may be self hypnotized by gazing fixedly at the snake, the subject being thus thrown into a sort of trance, making no attempt to move out of danger unless roused by some exterior influence. - San Diego Cor. POPULAR PHRASES.

ORIGIN OF SOME OF THE CATCH-WORDS THAT EVERYBODY USES.

We Have Taken Some From the English and Invented Very Many Ourselves-How We Came to Adopt Some of the Phrases Which Are In General Use.

Mention has been recently made of the disputed origin of the word "teetotal," claimed by two inventors, one living in England and the other in America, and each of whom may have | ticed on to the stage. hit upon the word independently and for the different reasons assigned. The word "machine," as we use it poscores of the games played by Pillsbury litically, is another which, like "teeand Tschigorin and Lasker and Steinitz total," is of doubtful parentage. In the on Jan. 2 and the first game of the days of the old volunteer fire companies, fourth round played between Pillsbury which in large cities were potent factors in local politics, the phrase "to run with the machine" came into common use, and it meant that a man so spoken of was identified with the political coterie of the fire company with which he trained. The famous Boss Tweed began his career in New York "running with the machine" as a volunteer fireman. Yet the term as we now employ it was used in England long before. The Duke of Wellington, in a letter to a friend in 1845 deploring the increasing influence of popular agitation on the action of the houses of parliament, said: "Such is the operation of the machine as now established that no individual, be his character, conduct in antecedent circumstances and his abilities what they may, can have any personal influence in general." We may have derived our term 'the machine' from our old volunteer fire company days, but in the England of Wellington's time there were no fire companies exerting any political influ-

That much overworked word "crank" gained universal vogue in connection with Guiteau's assassination of President Garfield, but it was long before that applied by the late Don Piatt, who claimed to be its inventor, to Horace Greeley, the purpose of it being to liken the famous editor to the crank of a hand organ, which is forever grinding out the same old tunes. The word, as we have now come to apply it, means much more and worse. It implies a condition of mind verging upon insanity, and this has given rise to the erroneous notion that it has its origin in the German word "krank."

> The word "dago," now commonly applied to Italians all over the country, came originally from Louisiana, where it at first referred only to people of Spanish origin, but was later applied to Italians and Portuguese as well. The word is a corruption of "Diego" (James), which is a common Spanish name, San Diego being the patron saint of the Spaniards.

> Another word of incessant employment in American speech is "dude," with its feminine complement, "dudine." This may have come to us from the old English word for clothes-'dudes.'' are also of disputed derivation. We all know about the English music hall song which set the word going with a new meaning in 1877, but the original coinage of the term "By jingo!" is quite doubtful. In the Basque language the word jingo means God, and it is widely on the head, and there wasn't a peep believed that "By jingo!" was a form of oath with which the Basque sailors the Harlem bridge was reached and the familiarized the English sailors and, crowd got out.-New York Sun. through them, all English speaking people. Smuggling liquor was one of Chester's horrors. He surrounded the post with a cordon of sentries who had no higher duty apparently than that of preventing the entrance of alcohol in any form. He had run a "red cross" crusade against the post trader's store in the matter of light wines and small beer, claiming that only adulterated stuff was sold to the men and forbidding the sale of anything stronger than "pop" over the trader's counter. Then, when it became apparent that liquor was being brought on the reservation, he made vigorous efforts to break up the practice. Colonel Maynard rather poohpoohed the whole business. It was his theory that a man who was determined to have a drink might better be allowed to take an honest one, coram publico, than a smuggled and deleterious article, but he succumbed to the rule that only "light wines and beer" should be sold at the store and was lenient to the poor devils who overloaded and deranged their stomachs in consequence. But Chester no sooner found himself in command than he launched into the crusade with redoubled energy and spent hours of the day and night trying to capture invaders of the reservation with a bottle in their pockets. The bridge was guarded, so was the crossing of the Cloudwater to the south, and so were the two roads entering from the north and west, and yet there was liquor coming in, and as though "to give Chester a benefit" some of the men in barracks had a royal old spree on Saturday night, and the captain was sorer headed than any of the participants in consequence. In some way he heard that a rowboat came up at night and landed supplies of contraband down by the riverside out of sight and hearing of the sentry at the railway station, and it was thither he hurriedly led Rollins this Monday evening.

The words "jingo" and "jingoism"

They turned across the railway on reaching the bottom of the long stairs and scrambled down the rocky embankment on the other side, Rollins following in reluctant silence and holding his sword so that it would not rattle, but he had no faith in the theory of smugglers. He felt in some vague and unsat isfactory way a sense of discomfort and anxiety over his captain's late proceedings, and his stealthy descent seemed fraught with ill omen.

Once down in the flats, their footsteps made no noise in the yielding sand, and all was silence save for the clash of the waters along the shores. Far down the river were the reflections of one or two twinkling lights, and close under the bank in the slack water a few stars were peeping at their own images, but no boat was there, and the captain led still farther to a little copse of willow, and there in the shadows, sure enough, was a rowboat, with a little lantern dimly burning, half hidden in the stern.

Not only that, but as they halted at the edge of the willows the captain put forth a warning hand and cautioned silence. No need. Rollins' straining eyes were already fixed on two figures that were standing in the shadows not 10 feet away-one that of a tall, slender man, ment before Rollins could recognize either, but in that moment the girl had turned suddenly, had thrown her arms about the neck of the tall young man,

CHAPTER XV.

Tuesday still, and all manner of things had happened and were still to happen in the hurrying hours that followed Sunday night. The garrison woke at Tuesday's reveille in much perturbation of spirit, as has been said, but by 8 o'clock and breakfast time one cause of perplexity was at an end. Relief had come with Monday afternoon and Alice Renwick's letter saying she would not attend the german, and now still greater relief in the news that sped from mouth to mouth-Lieutenant Jerrold was in close arrest. Armitage and Chester had been again in consultation Monday night, said the gossips, and something new had been discoveredno one knew just what-and the toils had settled upon Jerrold's handsome head, and now he was to be tried. As usual in such cases, the news came in through the kitchen, and most officers heard it at the breakfast table from the lips of their better halves, who could hardly find words to express their sentiments as to the inability of their lords to explain the new phase of the situation. When the first sergeant of Company B came around to Captain Armitage with the sickbook soon after 6 in incidentally paid a sterling compliment the morning the captain briefly directed him to transfer Lieutenant Jerrold on the morning report from present for duty to "in arrest," and no sooner was it known at the quarters of Company B than it began to work back to officers' row through the medium of the servants and strikers. It was the sole topic of talk for a full hour. Many ladies who had intended going to town by the early train almost periled their chances of catching the same in their eagerness to hear further details.

But the shrick of the whistle far up the valley broke up the group that was so busily chatting and speculating over in the quadrangle, and with shy yet curious eyes the party of at least a dozen-matrons and maids, wives or sisters of the officers-scurried past the darkened windows of Mr. Jerrold's quarters, | Charles, who is the King of Roumania. and through the mysterious passage west This monarch is one of the most interof the colonel's silent house, and down esting of the rulers of Europe. It is the long stairs, just in time to catch now thirty years since Charles was the train that whirled them away cityward almost as soon as it had disgorged the morning's mail. Chatting and laughing and full of blithe anticipation of the glories of the coming german, in preparation for which most of their number had found it necessary to run in for just an hour's shopping, they went jubilantly on their way. Shopping done, they would all meet, take luncheon together at the Woman's Exchange, return to the post by the afternoon train and have plenty of time for a little nap before dressing for the german. Perhaps the most interesting question now up for discussion was, Who would lead with Mr. Rollins? The train went puffing into the crowded depot, the ladies hastened forth and in a moment were on the street, cabs and carriages were passed in disdain, a brisk walk of a block carried them to the main thoroughfare and into the heart of the shopping district, a rush of hoofs and wheels and pedestrians there encountered them, and the roar assailed their sensitive and unaccustomed ears, yet high above it all pierced and pealed the shrill voices of the newsboys darting here and there with their eagerly bought journals. It was then that he successfully negotiated the marriage between his heir and the daughter of no less powers than the imperial house of Russia and Great Britain. King Charles' crown is an iron one. It was made of metal from the cannons taken from the Turks at Plevna some years before it was fashioned into the little circlet that rests on his brows whenever he cares to fit it to his head. He fought gallantly for that crown, and those who like monarchies and the things that to them belong will not grudge him his reward, such as it is. One day when a coupe driven along Broadway at the rate of ten miles an hour had come within a hairbreadth insisted upon his going barefooted to of running me down I followed it up for church with shoes on his arm, to be three or four blocks until it came to a put on at the door, that the wear and halt beside the curbstone.

"Do you know," I said to the driver, was at such points in his address that who grinned as he saw me approach, "that you nearly ran me down ten minutes ago?" 'Yes, sir,' he promptly replied.

"You had me in between your carriage and a cable car, and it was a close

"Yes, it was, sir." "You didn't even try to pull up your horse," I persisted. "No, sir."

"Then you didn't care whether you ran me down or not?" "No, sir." "Well, that's cool! Are you in the habit of killing people who may be crossing the street as you come along? "Not in the habit, no, sir. You see, it was this way. A gent picks me up at the Fifth Avenue and wants to git down to the Star theater in flye minutes. I can't git him there in five, but I can in eight if there isn't a block and the wheels stay on, and I does it and gets 50

"But where do I come in?" "You? Why, you escaped with your life, and there's no kick coming to you. Wait till you are run down and killed and then let the widdy do the kickin."

LIVE FISH IN HER STOMACH. After Suffering Ten Years She Managed to

Be Rid of It. Mrs. John Davis of Scranton, Pa., the other evening ejected from her stomach a living fish. It was perfectly formed and was seven inches long and an inch and a half broad

Mrs. Davis is 36 years old, and has only been in America three months, coming here with her husband and five children from Swansea, Wales. She had long been a sufferer from sickness at her home in Wales, and the cause not being fathomed by the physicians it was felt that a change of climate would prove beneficial. Her sickness covered a period of ten years. Mrs. Davis had been unable to eat any solid food and her only nourishment has been milk and wine.

Thursday evening, about 6 o'clock, an unusual and severe and painful sickness suddenly came upon her, and before a physician arrived Mrs. Davis was taken with violent vomiting, almost to strangulation. There were several violent ejections of liquid, and then followed the live fish.

The fish was perfectly formed, and was complete to tail and fins. It was very weak, however, and moved feebly when placed in water. How the fish came into the system of Mrs. Davis is unknown and can be explained in no other way than that she drank it with water some years ago.

As soon as the fish had been ejected and the weakness caused by the violent effort in relieving her of it had passed away, Mrs. Davis began to feel better and rejoiced with her friends that at last she was rid of the trouble that had made life so miserable to her. This morning she was greatly improved in spirits and health, and with the ability to take and retain substantial food her complete recovery is expected. The fish has shrunk somewhat since Thursday night. It is white, though more of a cream color now than when it first came to view. The tail was unusually long, and was flapped with much energy. It will be put in alcohol and preserved. -Philadelphia Press.

A HERMIT THIRTY YEARS.

Hammell Lived In the Woods as the Result of a Political Vow.

After having been absent from home for nearly 30 years, during which time he lived the life of a hermit in the woods, David Hammell of Hardwick township, N. J., has returned to his

His desertion of his wife and three children was due to a quarrel over his support of Marcus S. Ward, Republican candidate for governor of New Jersey in 1866, and his prolonged absence was due to a solemn oath he took that he would never return home till a Republican was again seated in the executive chair at the state capitol. He has at times been obliged to live on acorns, but he kept his yow. The inauguration of Governor Griggs permitted him to return to his former residence, where he was received with rejcicing and ap-

Hammell went into the woods and secured timber, with which he built himself a hut. He lived alone in this all these years until the election of John W. Griggs as governor.

Efforts were made by his family time and time again to effect a reconciliation, but he would not go home, saying that he intended to live alone until a Republican was elected governor. His wife and family remonstrated with him, but he refused to speak to them, and the impression went abroad that he was dumb. Hammell took his supplies from the house and barn and never said a word to any one until the news was received that John W. Griggs had been elected governor last fall. -New York

AT ENGLAND'S REQUEST.

Governor Rich Pardons a Convict on Condition That He Leave the Country.

Four years ago M. J. Bronkhurst, an English boy, was sentenced to ten years' imprisonment for assaulting and robbing a man in Detroit. It appears that Bronkhurst comes from an old English family, and his widowed mother implored the assistance of the English government to obtain his release. The correspondence was conducted through the English consul at Philadelphia. Strenuous efforts were made to secure a pardon, and Governor Rich at last consented to pardon Bronkhurst on the condition that the British consul send a man here to accompany the convict to New York and ship him back to England. The further condition was Bronkhurst's promise that he would never come back to America.

Malcom Lenox, representative of the consulate office in Philadelphia, arrived the other day at Ionia, Mich., and at once started for New York with Bronkhurst. The latter is now only 18 years old.

Bound to Have the Exposition. Plans for the Transmississippi and International exposition at Omaha are now fully under way. An association has been organized and capital stock to the amount of $10,650 subscribed. This was done at an enthusiastic meeting at the Commercial club rooms the other night, which was attended by a large number of the prominent and energetic business men of that city. The date of the exposition was fixed for August, September and October, 1898. A board of directors was elected.

Dumas' Last Poem.

The poem of which this is a free translation was the last one written by Alexandre Dumas. It is addressed to Sigrid Arnoldson, the well known singer: As sentinel and servant of the Lord,

A pitying angel shrouds from mortal eyes sweet Eden; ever he keeps watch and ward, Barring the golden gates of paradise. A single ray from earlier, happier days Remains to soothe us when our sorrow sting. Hence come my dreams, my joy in love, my

MANUFACTURERS

Who desire a location combining every feature conducive to prosperity, sufficiently near to San Francisco to enjoy all the privileges of a site in the metropolis, and yet sufficiently remote to escape the heavy taxation and other burdens incident to the city.

Where a ship canal enables vessels to discharge their cargoes on the various wharves already completed for their accommodation.

Where large ferry boats enter the large ferry slip now in use, and land passengers, freight and whole trains of cars. Where an independent railroad system gives ample switching privileges to every industry.

Where a private water-works plant, with water mains extending throughout the entire manufacturing district, supplies an abundance of pure artesian water at rates far below city prices.

Where some of the largest industries in the State are today located and in full operation.

Where hundreds of thousands of dollars have already been spent in perfecting the locality for manufacturing purposes. Where the South San Francisco Land and Improvement Company own THIRTY-FOUR HUNDRED acres of land and Seven Miles of Water Front on the San Francisco Bay, and on the main line of the Southern Pacific Railroad.

Where, in fact, rail, wharf and other privileges are unexcelled for manufacturing purposes by any other locality on the coast.

If you desire such a location come and see what we have in South San Francisco, San Mateo County. For further information call or address

SOUTH SAN FRANCISCO LAND & IMPROVEMENT CO.

TO HOME-SEEKERS

The South San Francisco Land and Improvement Company, comprising many San Francisco, Chicago and New York capitalists, created in San Mateo county a new town site known as South San Francisco. This town site is situated on the main line of the Southern Pacific Railroad, and also on the Southern Pacific Bay Shore Railroad, soon to be finished; it is also at the terminus of the San Francisco and San Mateo Electric Railway.

South San Francisco was platted as a town just prior to the great financial panic of 1893 and 1894; during all that period of financial wreck and ruin, when almost every new enterprise and many old-established institutions were actually swept out of existence, she has held her own and is to-day a prosperous community with a population of nearly eight hundred people.

Upwards of $2,000,000 in cash have been expended in laying the foundation of this new town. Most of the streets have been graded, curbed and sewered, miles of concrete sidewalk laid, trees planted along the main highways, and a water-works plant completed, giving an abundant supply of pure artesian water for every purpose. But the foundation laid in what is known as the manufacturing district of this town site constitutes above all others the most positive guarantee for the future of South San Francisco

There is no stability nor permanency so absolute respecting real estate values, and the future growth of any community like that which is based upon industries giving employment to men. The facilities created by the founders of South San Francisco have already secured to her several large manufacturing enterprises, and will soon secure many more; this means not only an increase in population, but an enhancement in real estate values.

South San Francisco has passed the experimental stage, and is now an established town. Many of her lot owners who have properly improved their holdings are even to-day realizing from ten to twenty per cent net on their investments. How many communities as new as South San Francisco can make this boast? An independent community in itself, with its own supporting elements, and at the same time close to the metropolis of California, and in the direction in which San Francisco must necessarily grow, already reached by some of the city's street car service, and certain to be on the line of any new railroad entering San Francisco, South San Francisco presents to-day opportunities for investment among the safest and best on the Pacific Coast.
